HabbitQuest Product Tour

Nov 3, 2026 · @Rahul

What families see, screen by screen: kids play picture quests, grown-ups approve them, and an AI coach suggests what to try next.

At a glance

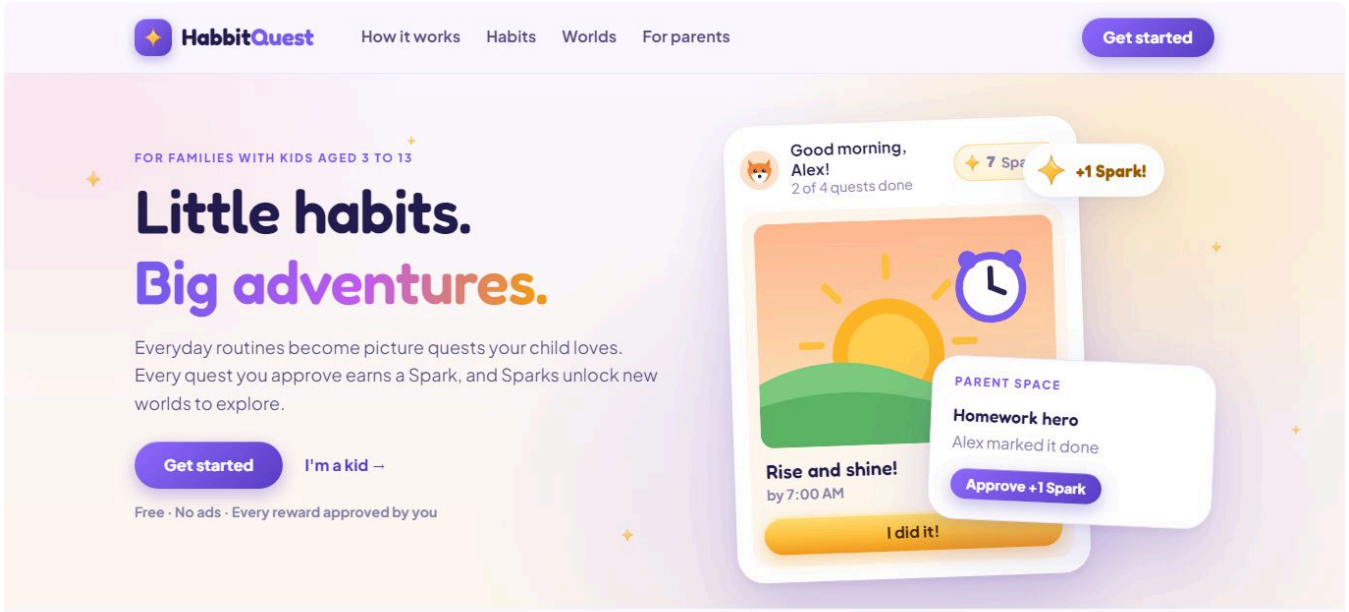

the two journeys · 5 steps each

The child does the quests; the grown-up appears only to plan, approve and reward.

1. Getting started

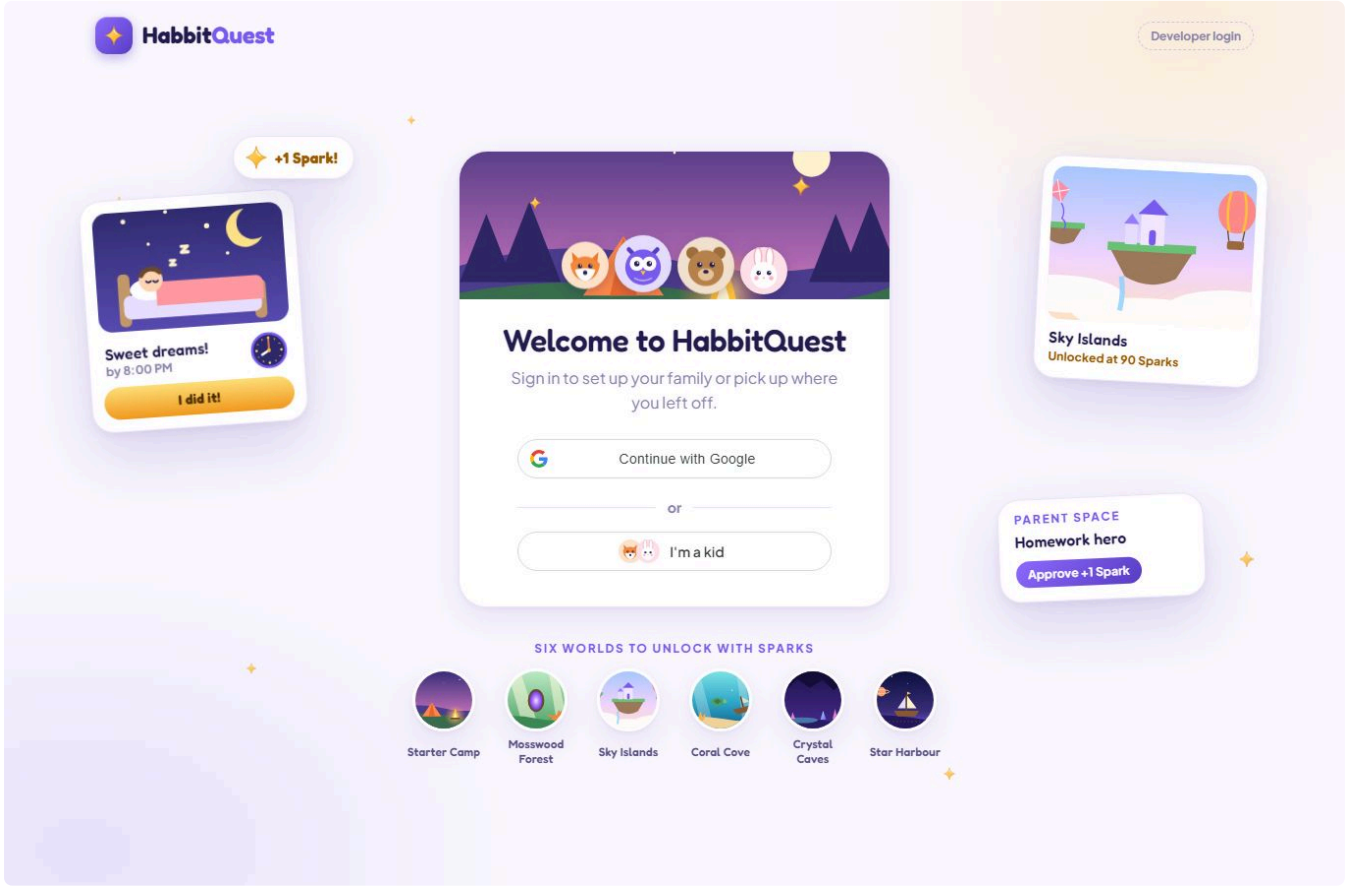

A family is set up in under a minute: sign in with Google, name the family, add the first child.

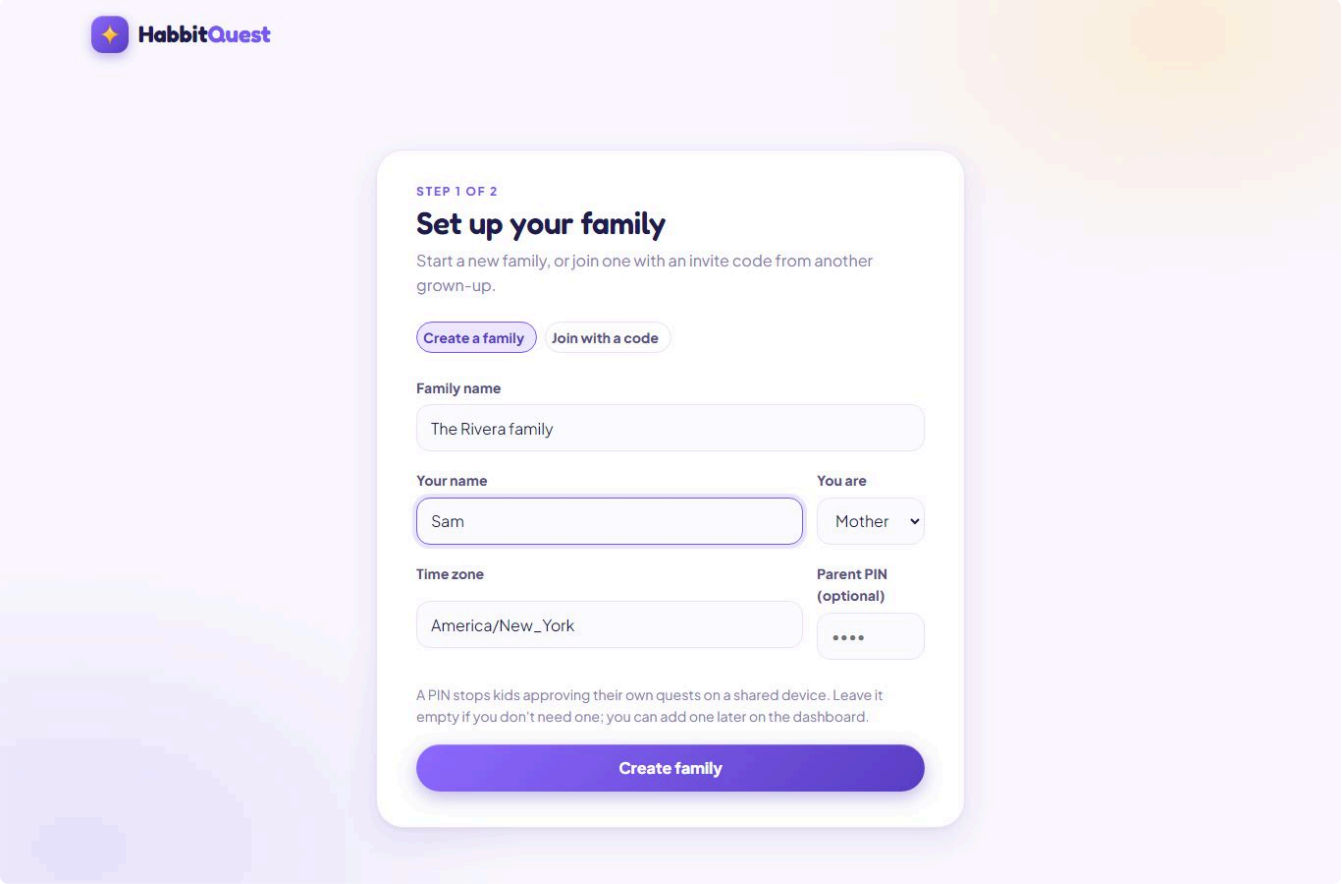

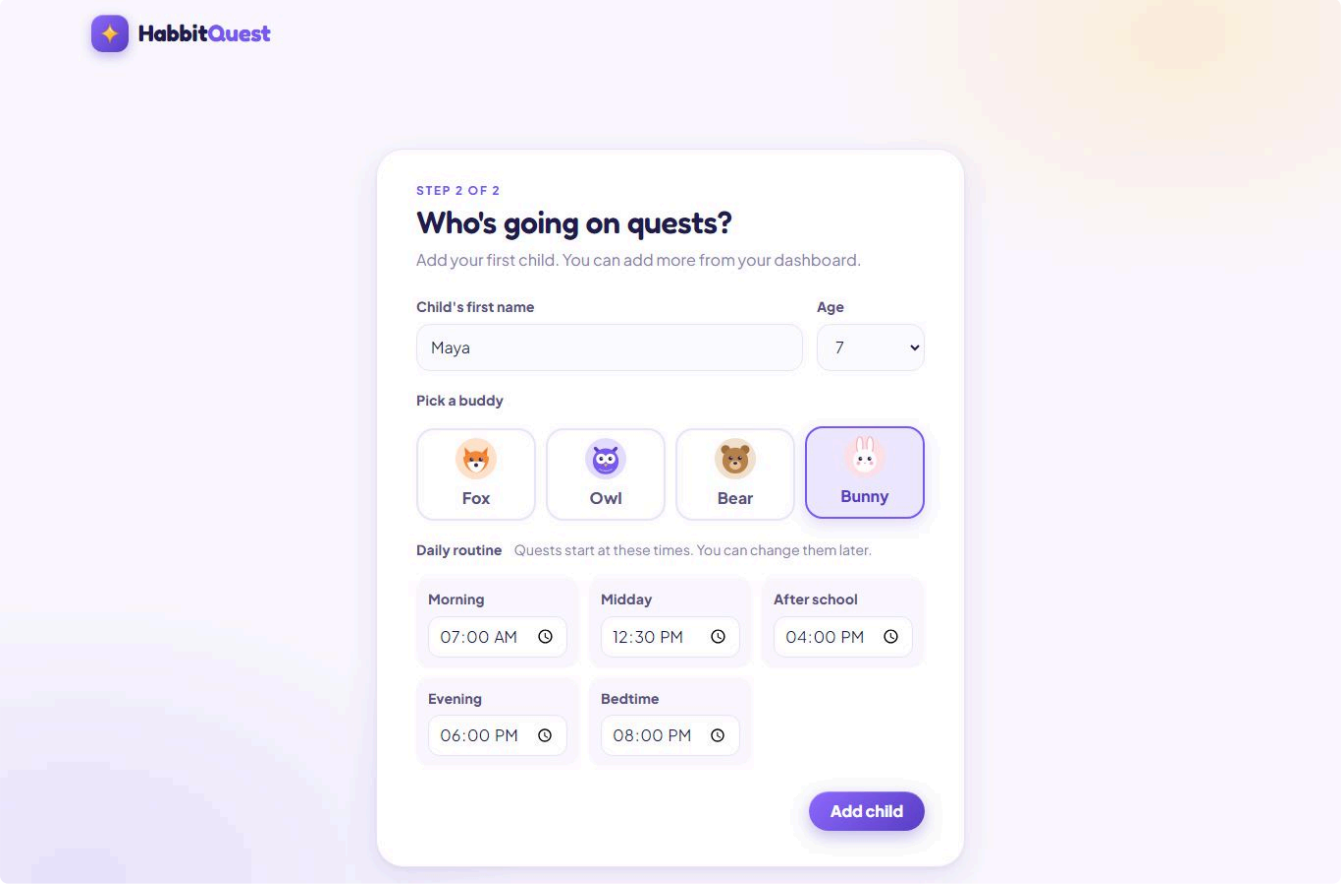

A SIMPLE DAILY JOURNEY

Five small steps, every day

1. Parents choose — Pick the habits that matter and set the times that suit your family.
2. Kids see pictures — Each habit becomes a bright picture quest with a clock to match.
3. "I did it!" — Your child taps the quest when it's done. No reading needed.
4. You approve — A quick check from you, protected by your parent PIN.
5. Sparkle! — A Spark lands in their jar, and Sparks unlock new worlds.

- More grown-ups join with an invite code; everyone sees the same family.
- Kids' own devices sign in with the family code (a QR code) and the child's own PIN.

2. The parent dashboard

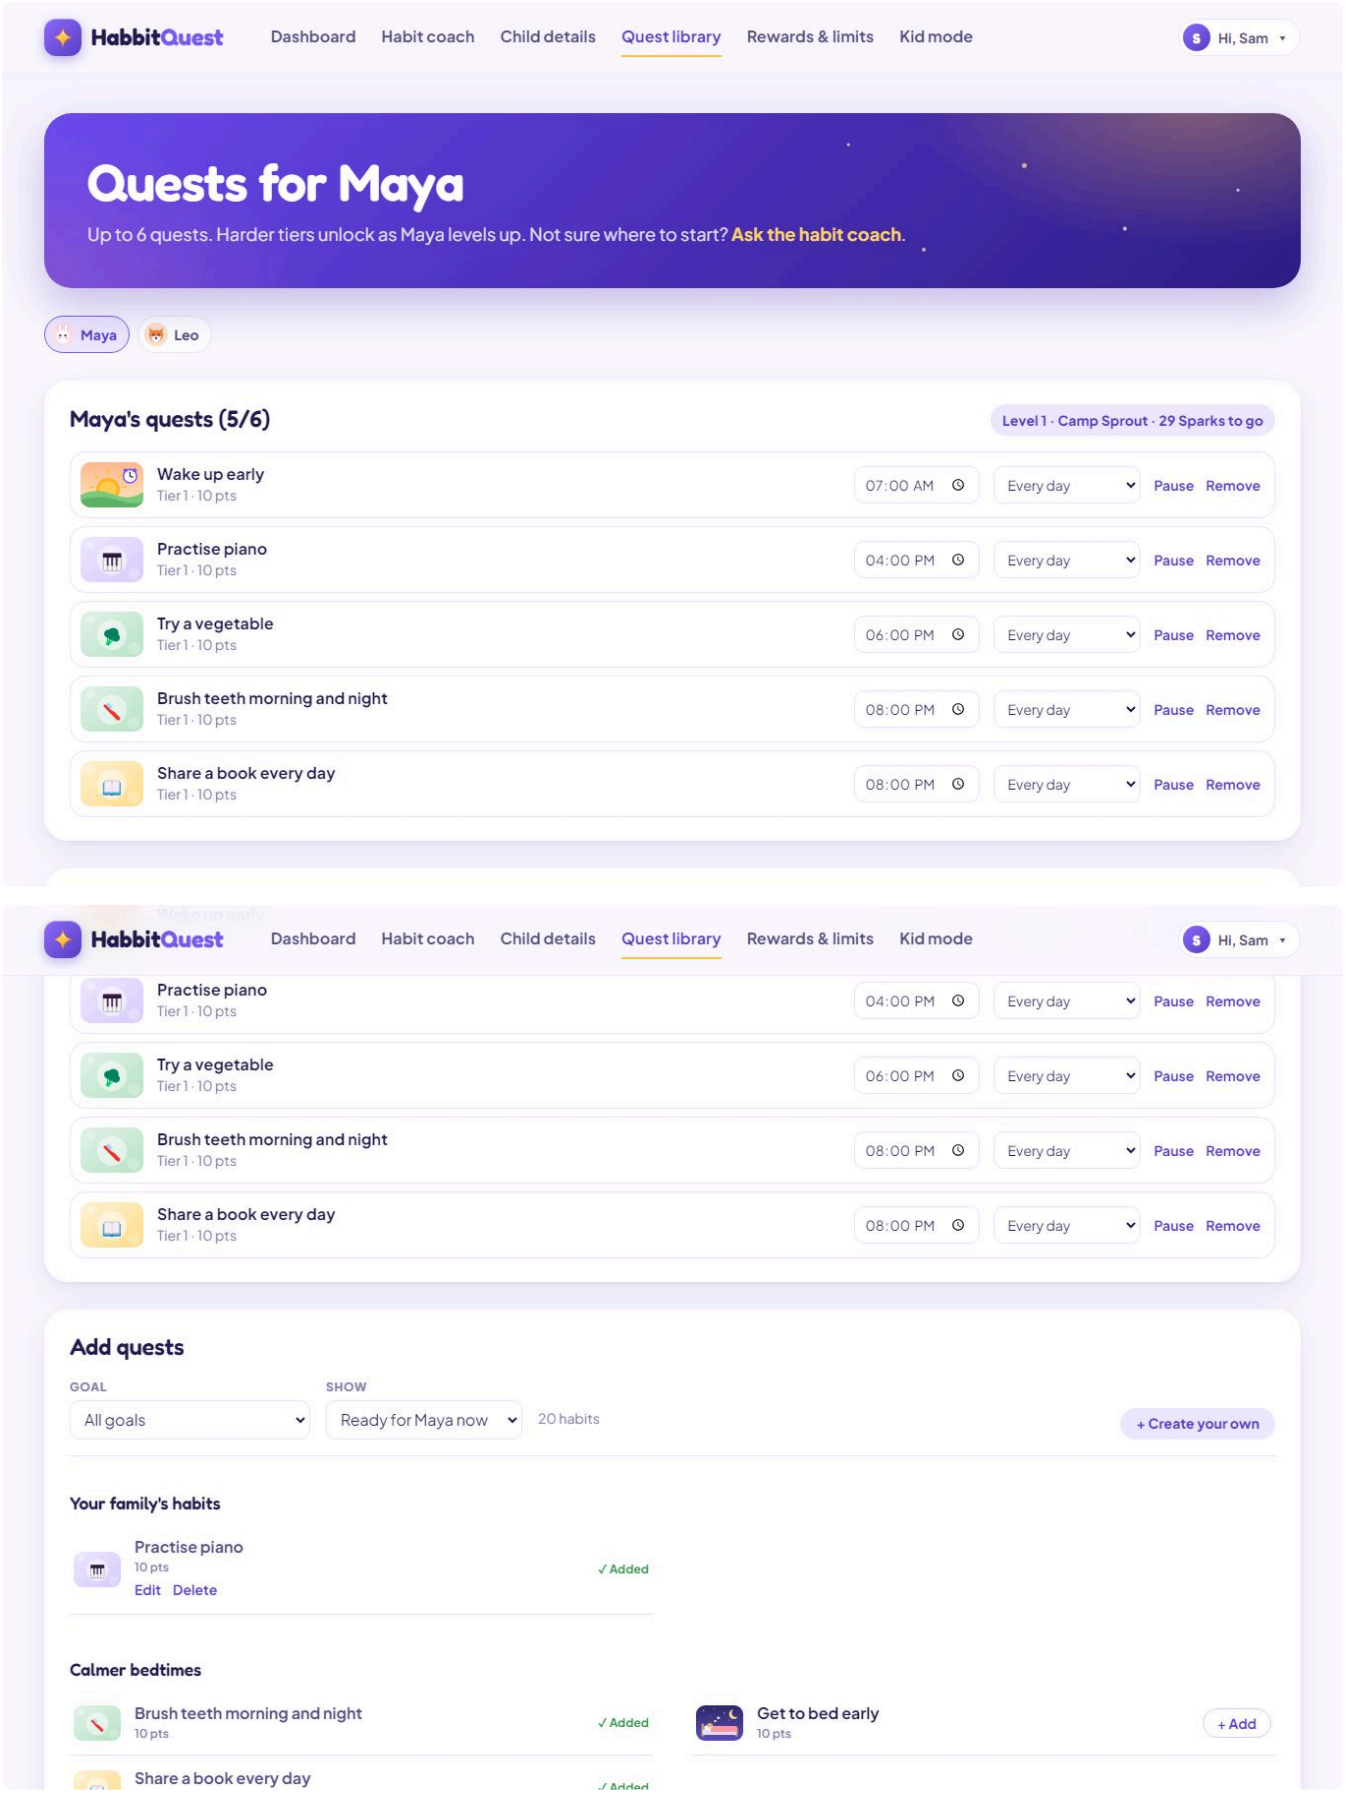

One screen answers "what needs me today?": quests waiting for approval, then each child's progress.

On the dashboard	What it does
Waiting for your OK	Approve (+Sparks, +points) or Not yet, one tap each
Child cards	Today's progress, Sparks, points, level, minutes in the app
Below the fold	Reward requests, kids' check-ins, surprises, AI suggestions and weekly review

3. Quest library

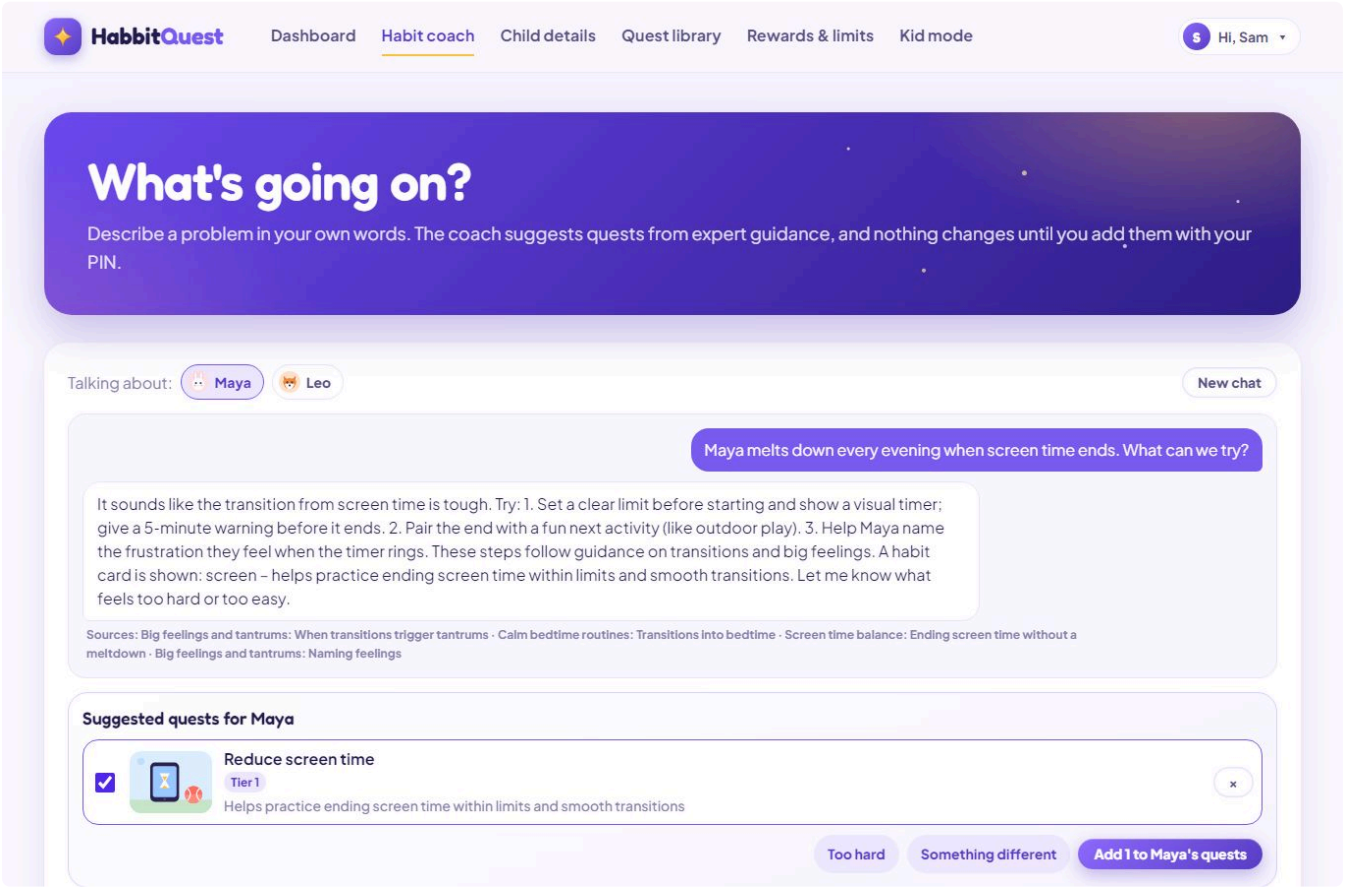

Each child gets up to 6 quests, each with its own time and days. Harder tiers unlock as the child earns Sparks.

- 41 catalog habits in 8 goals, tagged by age (3-13) and tier (1-3).
- Create your own: up to 30 family habits, such as "Practise piano". Their text never goes to the AI.

4. Habit coach

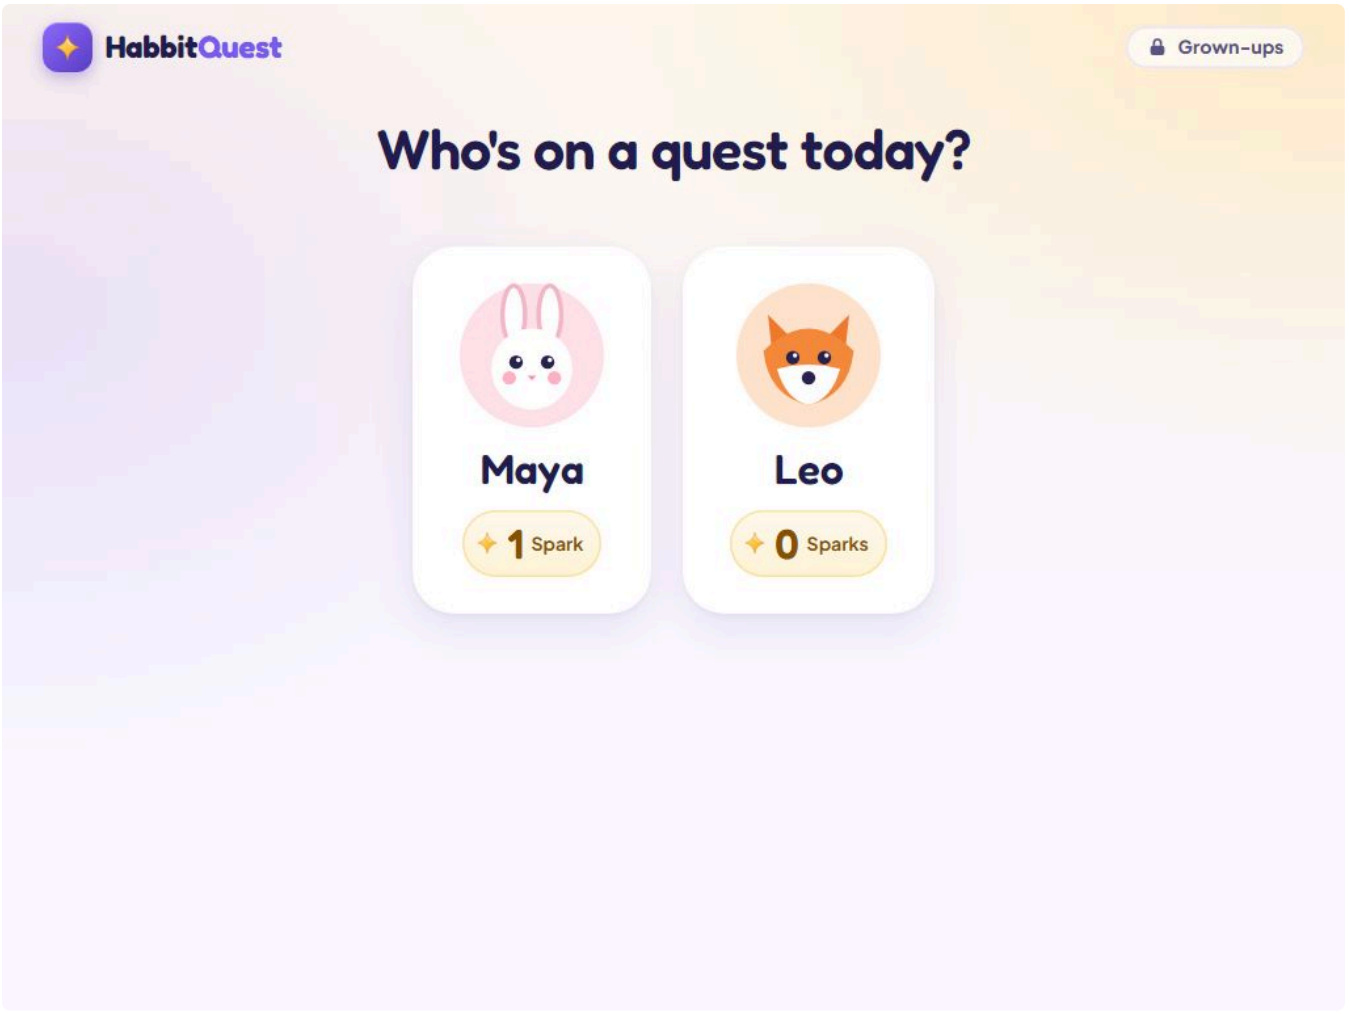

A parent describes a problem in plain words; the coach answers with cited advice and quest cards. This is a real answer from the coach crew running on Groq:

- Sources under every reply name the guidance it used.
- Cards, not changes: nothing joins the plan until a grown-up taps Add. Too hard or Something different asks again.
- How the crew works is in the AI deep dive.

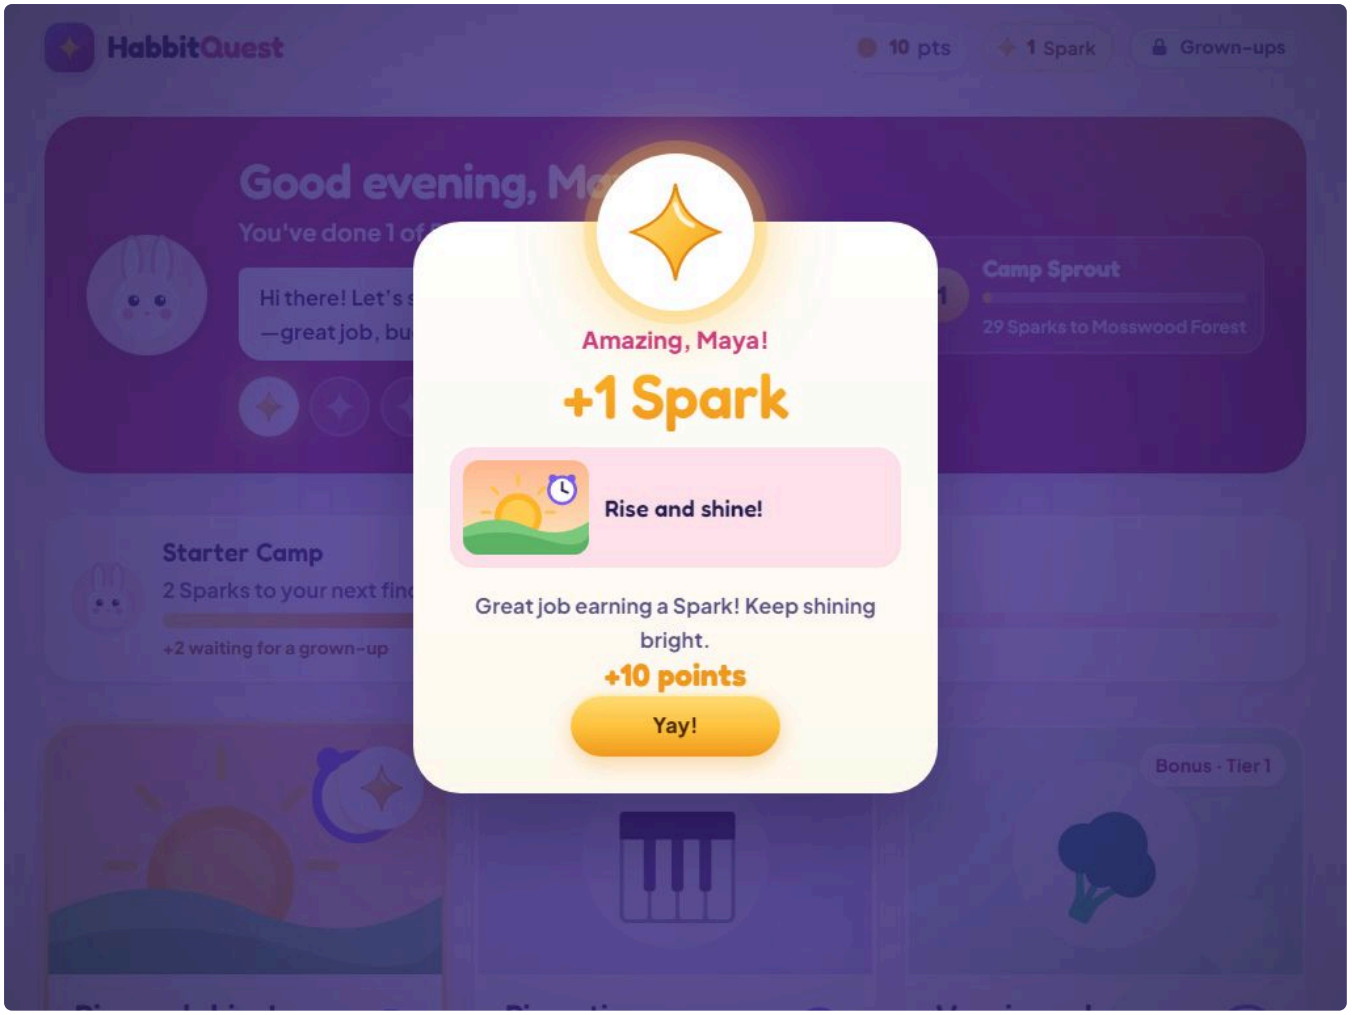

5. Kid mode

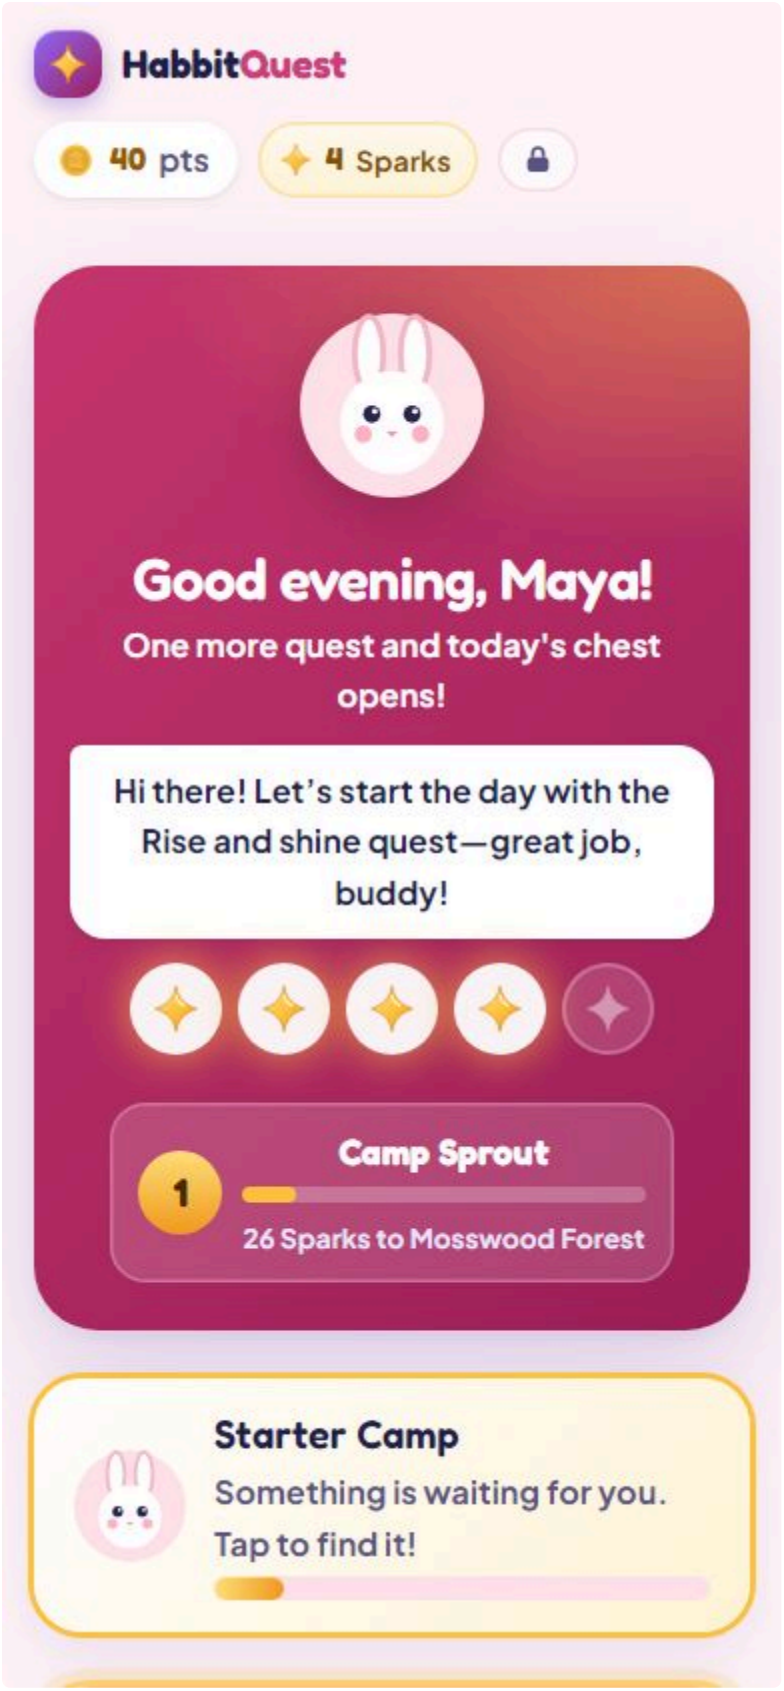

Picture-first, so a 3-year-old can use it without reading. A grown-up taps Open kid mode, or a child signs in on their own device.
